Civil disobedience is a well considered
 "Civil disobedience is a public, non-violent act that is motivated by conscience but normally -- illegal, and is usually aimed at changing laws or government policy." (John Rawls, 1971)

"Whoever breaks a law that according to his conscience is unjust & willingly accepts the punishment in order to awaken the conscience of his fellow citizens and to open their eyes on the injustice of that law, shows the highest respect for that law." (Martin Luther King, 1963)
